Definition of Terms

Statutory warranty

The statutory warranty is defined by law and runs 24 months for new goods. It covers damage that the goods had at the time of the transfer of risk (that is on purchase / handover). The statutory warranty applies only to these damages that were already present at the time of purchase / delivery and NOT for damages that have arisen in the course of use.

Manufacturer warranty

The manufacturer warranty is a voluntary service of the manufacturer (manufacturer's warranty) or the dealer (dealer's warranty). These can freely determine duration and conditions. It does not matter if a defect existed from the beginning or did not arise until later. Wear & tear parts such as batteries are usually excluded from the warranty. The warranty is not regulated by law. It is often guaranteed that the product will work for the stated life time expectancy, if the customer uses it as intended. The statutory warranty will always remain in place.

Manufacturer warranty for Ottobock products

General: For parts repaired or replaced under this warranty, we provide a warranty under these terms for the warranty period remaining for the product.

That is: if a part is changed after 18 months, the 24-months manufacturer warranty from the day of purchase are still valid, the part only has another 6-months manufacturer warranty then.

Measures which the seller carries out on the basis of a warranty claim with manufacturer warranty (e.g. replacement of parts) and which have no material defect as cause, do not justify any legal claims arising from a defect-related, statutory warranty (Example: If a part is changed under the manufacturer warranty, the statutory warranty does not start necessarily again for 24 months).

Prerequisites

- For every claim the serial number of the complete product must be specified
- Failure pattern should be described in as much detail as possible (symptoms, no cause)
- A complete complaint form must be filled out or SAP S4 notification raised

Exclusions

- Normal wear & tear, including e.g. tires, casters, ball bearings, textile covers, arm support pads, carbon brushes, lights
- Force majeure
- Use for sports activities (except sport products)

Improper handling and use

- Damage resulting from accident, negligence or improper and inappropriate handling and non-specific use
- Exceeding the gross vehicle weight (conversions, attachments, user weight, luggage)
- Adjustments, changes, modifications, installations or other work on the product without approval of the manufacturer (including use or connection of the product with inappropriate or non-approved parts)

Exclusions for batteries

- Damage resulting from charging not as described by the manufacturer or with a charger not approved by the manufacturer
- Damage due to deep discharge
- Damage resulting from unauthorized battery replacement
- Damage caused by unauthorized modification of the product
- Damage from a change in the charging characteristic
